

The ability to retain a current cell phone number when switching Carriers is fundamental for efficient business operations, and is a primary concern for the personal user. The inability to contact a user during a carrier switch could result in anything from mild inconvenience to a life threatening situation in a medical emergency. This Country needs to implement efficiencies like this to stay competitive. Anything less is short sighted.